HISTORY:

The community is located on an island of the same name in the Foxe Basin. The area has been populated for some 4,000 years and had its beginning as a hunting and fishing camp.

The area was visited by Thomas Burton in 1613. There was frequent contact during the 19th century by explorers searching for a North West passage.

The permanent settlement of the present site took place in the 1930's when the Hudson's Bay post was opened. A Roman Catholic mission was established shortly thereafter.

The Igloodik Co-operative was formed in 1963 under the leadership of Pacome Qulant and Father Fournier when some of the outpost camps were faced with famine. Several boats were purchased to be used for walrus, whale and caribou hunting. The food was shared among the people and the objects of value, such as walrus tusks, were sold to cover the costs and to provide funds for expansion.

The Co-op now operates a retail store, a restaurant, does local contracting, delivers oil and purchases fur, fish, arts and crafts.
